

Dan McMullen

I was not raised in a Christian home. Growing up, our family only attended church on Christmas and Easter. When I was 21 years old, I met a Christian family at a church carwash, and they invited me to attend church with them. I began going to Mission Hills Baptist Church in Littleton, and through the faithful teaching of God's Word, God gradually revealed to me that I was a sinner in need of a Savior. A few months later I accepted Christ as my Lord and Savior. After coming to faith, I became actively involved in church and served in several ministries.

Fast forward seven months....I was introduced to the world of dirt bikes. I quickly developed a love for riding, and by the end of that summer I was racing motocross. Over the next nine years, I pursued my dream of becoming a professional motocross racer. My time, energy, and resources became focused on that pursuit, and my walk with Christ suffered as a result. Church attendance became rare, and my spiritual life was nearly nonexistent as I drifted back into a life centered on my own desires.

During those years, I remained in contact with a few friends from church. One of them invited me to a singles Bible study where we studied J.I. Packer's book Knowing God. Through that study, God began working in my heart and showed me that I was not living the life He had called me to live. I began reevaluating my priorities and renewing my commitment to Him.

It was during that time that I met my beautiful wife, Tracey. Soon after, I recommitted my life to Christ and was baptized as a public expression of my faith.

Tracey and I have now been married for 35 years. We are blessed with two adult children, both of whom are married: our son, Zach, is married to Becky, and our daughter, Kelsie, is married to Nick. We also have two wonderful grandchildren, Lucas and Mabel, who bring us great joy.

Today, I am a committed follower of Jesus Christ with a sincere desire to serve the Lord, support the mission of the church, and care for others. My passion is to use the gifts, experiences, and opportunities God has given me to encourage, assist, and serve those around me.
